

The road begins
by understanding your needs

To help devise the best route to achieving your business goals, an initial confidential meeting will be arranged with BRIC staff. We will:

Review your business plan

Offer a suggested course of action to provide you with direction

Match you with professional advisors with expertise in the area where assistance is needed.

About BRIC

BRIC is unique in its organization and available resources. BRIC has strong links and partnerships with the Small Business Administration, Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE) and other economic development agencies. The Business Resource Information Center (BRIC) can help remove unexpected obstacles to guide your new or established business to the next level.

A joint economic development project of the Eastern Montgomery County Chamber of Commerce, Abington Township and Penn State Abington, BRIC guides businesses along the path to a new infusion of resources and mentoring expertise necessary for existing enterprises to strengthen and grow and to help prospective business owners successfully launch new ventures.

Reaching your business destination: a collaborative approach

BRIC by BRIC, these organizations pave a new path to community business development through a unique combination of resources and expertise.

Representatives of the Eastern Montgomery County Chamber of Commerce offer existing and start up businesses direction on an ongoing basis. EMCCC is one of the top 10 chambers in the Philadelphia metropolitan area with hundreds of active members in diverse business pursuits.

Penn State Abington provides all of the educational resources associated with a four-year higher education institution offering a variety of baccalaureate degrees, certificates and professional training.

Abington Township Economic Development Office offers access to municipal officials and procedures important to both existing enterprises and new business ventures.
